DARING BANDITS SECURE $130,000 AT PENNSGROVE

Overwhelm Bank Teller and Armed Guard On Street;
Take Satchel

WAS DU PONT PAYROLL

Accomplished Without Gun-
Fire; Four Men Speed
Away in Car

PENNSGROVE, N. J., Feb. 2.—In a swift and daring fashion four bandits working with clock-like precision today overwhelmed a bank teller and an armed guard on a street here, snatched a satchel containing $130,000 in currency and escaped. The money was being carried to the National Bank and Trust Company to be used as the payroll of the E. I. DuPont-De Nemours Company plant here.

The hold robbery was executed just as the teller, Harold Anderson, and the armed guard, William Waddington, approached the entrance of the bank. The hold up was accomplished without the firing of a single shot.

A little black satchel containing the money was delivered to the bank teller at the post office protected by Guard Waddington, whose revolver was drawn. Anderson carried the satchel down the street. Just as the two men approached the entrance of the bank, a sedan drew up to the curb and came to a halt. Four men were in the automobile. Two of them, wearing pistols, leaped out of the car. Bracing their revolvers against the backs of the teller and the guard, the two bandits first disarmed Waddington, then one of the robbers struck Anderson on the wrist. The teller dropped the currency loaded satchel. Pushing Anderson aside, the robbers picked up the bag and leaped into the automobile which sped away.

The automobile carrying the four bandits was reported a short time later speeding toward Camden. Police throughout New Jersey and Pennsylvania were notified to be on the look-out and special details of highway patrolmen were dispatched to search every foot of the main roads in this vicinity.

According to witnesses of the robbery the bandit car license plates bore the number N. J.—C-22109. A check-up revealed the plates had been stolen from an automobile in Camden yesterday.

Will Abolish One Rural Route; Others' Pay Higher

Announcement is made that five rural mail carriers in Bucks County are to receive salary increases, effective March 1st. This will be brought about by abolition of a sixth route.

Tyrus H. Moyer, drawing $2190 at Perkasie, who has served over 30 years, is to be pensioned at $100 a month.

Dividing up his work will extend other routes and yield pay increases as follows: Henry H. Bean, at Quakertown, from $1980 to $2220; M. Irvin Myers, Quakertown, from $1980 to $2160; Charles F. Hess, from $1920 at Quakertown to $2190 at Perkasie; Charles H. Althouse, Quakertown, from $1980 to $2160; Lynn O. Koehler, Quakertown, from $1920 to $2190.

These increases total $1140, while the salary eliminated amounted to $2190, and thus the saving to the department is apparent. This saving results from a unique feature of the wage scale. On all routes up to 24 miles the rate is $75 a mile a year, but on extensions beyond that distance it drops to only $30 a mile a year.

Already by the policy of longer and fewer routes the R. F. D. annual costs have been cut more than $8,000,000 a year.

PUBLISHERS OF STATE MEETING IN PHILA.

Two-Day Convention Opens
in Benjamin Franklin,
Today

SOME NOTED SPEAKERS

New Deal legislation, the need for revision of the State constitution, State and local taxes, cost of government and technical problems having to do with the newspaper industry will be discussed at the 1934 annual convention of the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' Association, which will be held at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, Philadelphia, today and Saturday.

Several sessions of the convention will be devoted to ways and means of making the newspapers of Pennsylvania of greater reader interest. Editors and publishers will report on the response of readers to more and better coverage of vital national and State news during the last year. Rules for the administration of the newspaper and printing codes and advertising practices under codes outside the industry will be discussed by authorities on these subjects. Subscription prices and advertising rates also are listed for consideration.

The story of the part the newspapers have played in the New Deal at Washington will be told by William C. Murphy, Jr., president of the National Press Club, who is Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Albert B. Maris, a widely known Philadelphia attorney, is to speak on "The Need For State Constitutional Revision." Dr. Leonard P. Fox, manager of the research bureau of the State Chamber of Commerce, will talk on taxes and government expenses under the subject of "Pennsylvania at the Crossroads."

Advertising authorities who will talk from the angle of department stores, the advertising agencies and the codes, are H. H. Kynett, president of the Poor Richard Club of Philadelphia, a member of the firm of Aitkin-Kynett Advertising Agency; Kenneth Collins, of Gimbel Brothers Company, and Captain C. C. Curtis, advertising manager of the Allentown Morning Call.

Robert L. "Believe-It-Or-Not" Ripley, highest paid newspaper artist in the country, will speak at a luncheon, and Don Rose, Philadelphia Public Ledger columnist, is to talk on "Confessions of a Columnist." Frank L. Craft, classified advertising manager of the Ledger, is on the program for a talk on classified advertising. Don A. Johnson, of the Trenton Times, formerly director of the Empire State School of Printing at Ithaca, N. Y., will take for his subject "Net Profits."

Charles R. Long, editor and publisher of the Chester Times, president of the association, will preside at most of the general sessions and is in charge of the program. Clark Queer, publisher of the Mount Pleasant Journal, vice-president of the P. N. P. A., is in charge of four special sessions for the weekly and semi-weekly publishers.

Mr. Long reports that more than 300 editors and publishers will attend the convention. He expects a record number out because of the stirring times and the many major problems facing the newspapers today.

At special forums for the weekly papers, Leonard Ormerod, of the Philadelphia Electric Company, is to speak on "Small Communities and Big Opportunities;" David Magowan, advertising director of the Western Newspaper Union, will talk on "If I Were Advertising Manager of a Small-Town Newspaper;" H. E. Trout, of the Manheim Sentinel, on "Five Ways to Increase Job Printing;" and W. K. Uerlich, of the State College Times, on "Five Ways to Increase Circulation."

J. French Robinson, scientist and leader in the natural gas industry, is to tell about the growth in this field in Pennsylvania. Entertainment will include acts from the Stanley-Warner theatres in Philadelphia, singing by the Penn A. C. Glee Club and organ and orchestral concerts. In addition, there will be a historical tour, a shopping tour, bridge tournament for the ladies, and

LANDSCAPE TRANSFORMED INTO GLEAMING MASS OF WHITENESS AS HEAVY SNOW-FALL VISITS THE AREA; CONJECTURE OVER GROUND-HOG'S APPEARANCE

Boughs of Trees Laden With Snow Make A Pretty
Sight

CWA WORK CONTINUES

Activity of Thin Ground-Hog at Gobblers Knob is Told Of

The steady snow-fall of yesterday afternoon and last evening transformed the landscape into a mass of scintillating whiteness. With no wind to disturb the slowly but steadily piling snow on twigs, fences and buildings, last evening, the gleaming street and residence lights playing upon the section made a sight to behold.

Workers were out early with their shovels, making paths for pedestrians, but with the continuance of the snow into the night the early work was of little avail, and many found it necessary to do the task again this morning.

Scenes along streams in this area were particularly attractive this morning, the overhanging trees, laden with snow, being reflected in the waters beneath.

Two circuits of the fire alarm system were out of commission for a time last evening due to the snow. The weather bureau has announced that a new storm is travelling up the coast from Florida, with a second enroute from the Great Lakes regions.

The storm, however, did not deter the activities on the local CWA project, and the 500 men are still busy on the work in connection with the extension of the water-main system into Bristol Township.

There was some conjecture as to whether the storm would hinder the ground-hog in leaving his winter-home. Some were of the opinion that he might have failed heart when he saw the heavy snow-fall upon awaking this morning, and that he might not come forth in an attempt to cast his shadow. The sun rose bright, however, and there was a strong possibility that the ground-hogs in this section, if not deterred by the blanket of snow, would see their shadows.

THE WEATHER WORKS, GOBBLERS KNOB ON CANOE RIDGE, PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa., Feb. 2.—(INS)—Spring is just around the corner. The back of winter is broken! Standing in a shaft of brilliant sunshine the seer of Gobblers Knob this morning failed to cast a shadow.

After an hour of strenuous effort the world's champion shadow caster for all the distances admitted his inability to register a shade and called it a day. And so if you take your traditions seriously you can try and get something on the 1930 overcoat and have your ear muffs converted into a 1934 model bathing suit.

It was a weird exhibition the old chuck staged this morning in the presence of a large crowd.

AYRESHIRE BREEDERS FORM COUNTY GROUP

Start Off With A Membership of Seventy Herd
Owners

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

About 25 cattle breeders, owners of Ayrshire cows, attended a meeting on Monday afternoon in the Bucks County Administration Building, Doylestown, and formed the Bucks County Ayrshire Association.

Officers elected were: President, A. S. Mumbauer, of Spinnerstown; vice president, R. Walker Jackson, of Newtown; and secretary-treasurer, Clarence E. Leigh, of Quakertown.

Declaring that there are more Ayrshire breeders in Bucks county than in any other county in the State, T. P. Whittaker, field man of the National Ayrshire Breeders Association of Brandon, Vermont, was gratified at the turnout of local breeders and the interest shown.

Bucks county has about seventy breeders or herd owners, according to Mr. Whittaker.

Illustrations of world famous herds, located in Scotland, United States and Canada, and a discussion of the more prominent family blood-lines were presented.

In addition Mr. Whittaker showed slides illustrating the various points of a score card used in judging Ayrshires.

Dr. E. S. Deubler, of the Penhurst Farms, Narberth, a member of the Executive Committee of the National Association, announced that the National Farm School has extended an invitation to the Pennsylvania Ayrshire Breeders to hold their annual Summer field day at the school on Saturday, August 25.

County Agent William F. Greenawalt, who is responsible for the formation of the Ayrshire breeders into a county association, was impressed with the interest manifested.

ADVOCATE ALARM SYSTEM FOR FIRES

Morrisville Company Sends Recommendation To Borough Council

IS A GREAT NEED

MORRISVILLE, Feb. 2.—Installation of an auxiliary alarm for the Capital View Fire Company will have the consideration of the fire committee of Common Council at its next meeting.

This matter was advocated at the last meeting of the fire company by Edward Roberts, Jr., who explained that an electric alarm arrangement could be placed in front of the building for the use of people who know where the fire house is located but are not familiar with the method of turning in an alarm.

It is said that the arrangement would be very inexpensive and its installation would be justified. The council committee of the fire company was authorized to bring the matter to the attention of the fire committee of Common Council.

The fire company voted almost unanimously, after considerable discussion, to raise the initiation fee for admission to the company to $5. President Allen Woolfe submitted the proposal and was strongly supported by the older members. Past President George W. Duke, who occupied the chair as president for five consecutive years, heartily advocated the change, bringing out the fact that the company furnishes for the use of its members, a modern fire house with the conveniences of a free pool table, card tables, radio, showers, quilts, modern apparatus, free trips to conventions, parades, etc. The company also provides uniforms. He urged that the change be made to keep the calibre of its membership at the present high standard.

The report of the treasurer, Leland S. Godwin, showed the financial affairs of the company to be in splendid shape, in so far as the company is concerned. The tax fund, however, is low and the company has advanced some of its own funds to meet the obligations during the past year. Mr. Godwin, who has been treasurer of the company for 16 years, was warmly congratulated by President Woolfe for his excellent record.

The publicity officer, George W. Duke, was granted access to all company records in order to complete a history of the organization for the 25th anniversary which will be observed this year. Mr. Duke stated he intends to delve into the old minutes and compile a year to year record, bringing out the high spots of each year and the accomplishments of each administration. He stated that it would probably take four months to complete this work.

The company is now preparing for the annual convention and parade which will be held in Newtown in June when the annual convention of the Bucks County Firemen's Association will be held. The company will also participate in the parade to be held in Sunbury next Fall in connection with the annual convention of the State Firemen's Association.

BUTLER GIVES WAR VIEWS

Pittsburgh, Feb. 2.—A Russian-Japanese war into which the United States will be drawn by its desire to sell supplies was the prediction left here by Brigadier General Smolley D. Butler, retired U. S. Marine commander. Terming himself an ex-member of the "greatest bill collecting agency in the world, the United States Marines," Butler told members of the Traffic and Transportation Association: "the Russian-Japanese war that is to come off pretty soon, is going to be over oil and railroads and of course we are going into it. We will insist on selling supplies to the ones already in it and of course they will sink the ships carrying these supplies to the enemy; then we will go in on the side of the one that owes us most money. LUNCHEON IS FEATURE

LANGHORNE, Feb. 2.—Among the four charter members of Langhorne Sorosis who attended the birthday party covered dish luncheon in the library, yesterday, was Mrs. Joseph Lovett, who in December celebrated her 88th birthday. Mrs. Lovett was one of the club members whose birthday anniversaries occurred in December, and who presented a brief program as a contribution for the afternoon activities.

ROTARY CLUB FIRST SERVICE CLUB HERE

SPONSOR'S BOYS' WEEK

This is one of a series of articles in which an effort has been made to record the history of various organizations in this area. Some idea of that which has been accomplished by the organizations is also given and as much data is published as has been available. The information upon which the articles are based has been furnished by those still active in the organizations.

Article VI.

Bristol Rotary Club was the first service club to be organized in Bristol Borough. As is the stated rule the local Rotary Club is a group of representative business and professional men, one man from each distinct business or profession in the community, who have accepted the Rotary philosophy of service and have organized to study the theory of service "as the true basis of success and happiness in business."

The membership of Bristol Rotary Club is limited as is that of all Rotary Clubs, the intention being that each business and profession shall have one worthy and active exponent in the club, and that the club through its members may have one direct and responsible avenue of approach to all those engaged in each business and profession in the community.

Upon organization in 1924 the representative group of business men who formed Club No. 1725 here, chose James H. Brooks, as first president. There were 25 charter members, and of this number 12 are still connected with the club. The other charter members have been lost to the club by removal, death and withdrawal.

The total membership is now 33, and in pre-depression days the roster included the names of 50 well-known business men, each representing a different type of business. During its history 85 men have been affiliated with the organization. The motto of this service club is that of the Rotary International, of which Club 1725 is a part. The motto is "Service Above Self."—He Profits Most Who Serves Best.

Bristol Rotary Club is included in the 50th district, there being 70 such clubs in said district. District 50 includes Southern New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, and Delaware. There are over 5,000 clubs in Rotary International.

There are a number of things which the Bristol Rotarians have accomplished as a body, these being possible because they placed "Service Above Self." The club was in charge of the dental clinic for Bristol public schools for several years; it originated and backs the Boys' Week movement here, with many other local organizations now assisting. The Christmas eve sing at the Community Tree was in charge of the Rotarians here last December.

Through Bristol Rotary Club the NRA work in Bristol was started. Richard French, a member of Bristol Rotary Club and interested in that work from the club's standpoint, being appointed chairman of the Bristol NRA committee.

Weekly meetings occur Thursday nights at the Elks' home, Radcliffe street. Attendance at meetings of a Rotary club is obligatory. Any member absent from four successive meetings of his club without excuse acceptable to the club directors may suffer forfeiture of his membership. Attendance, however, at the meeting of any other Rotary club within the week immediately preceding or following his absence, counts for any Rotarian as attendance at his own club.

Bristol Rotary Club's officers are: President, Robert C. Ruehl; vice president, Jacob C. Schmidt, Sr.; secretary and treasurer, the Rev. S. Brooks Knowlton. The board of directors comprises the aforementioned officers and: Leslie Helwig, past president; Edward Lynn, Richard French, Robert F. Morris.

DIRECTORS MEET

Directors of Bristol Township public schools met last evening in the Maple Shade school building. Business transacted was of a routine nature.

ALL-TIME RECORD SET FOR LICENSES DURING JANUARY

A Total of 190 Granted
During the Past Month

ONE GRAND RUSH

Seventy Percent Were Non-Residents of Bucks County

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 2.—Right on the heels of a record-breaking 1933 year so far as marriage licenses are concerned in Bucks county, Cupid set a new all-time January record this year with a total of 190 licenses granted during the month.

The record of 190 was just one short of equalling the single month record of 191 held by the "merry month of June" two years ago.

It was just one big rush after another, that month of January, according to Clerk of Orphans' Court John Thompson, of Point Pleasant, and Deputy Clerk Jacob Shelly, of Fountainville. Applications for marriage licenses came in batches, sometimes as many as fifteen being received in one morning mail. It was nothing unusual on Saturday mornings in January to see as many as eight couples awaiting their turn in line to get a license.

The January marriage license docket shows that approximately seventy per cent of the applicants were non-residents of Bucks county out of the 380 individuals who applied for licenses. Trenton and Philadelphia set most of the applicants.

Bucks county, according to the clerks in charge of marriage license bureau, is becoming better known every day as a place to get "quick service" when seeking a marriage license as well as a wedding. There are any number of clergymen, Justices of the Peace, Burgesses and even Judges who are available to tie the knot in this section of Bucks county. There is no red tape, no waiting, the marriage license clerks point out.

In December last year there were 152 licenses granted so that January, starting off with a grand total of 190, gives 1934 a real start over other years in the marriage license business. There seems little doubt that during the present year the marriage license business in Bucks county will be doubled.

Thirteen of the male applicants and sixteen of the female applicants who received marriage licenses in January had been divorced. Three of the male applicants had been married twice and two of the female applicants took their third husband.

Most of the applicants ranged in ages between twenty-five and thirty and there were comparatively few under twenty-one years of age.

Make Another Arrest For Robbery of Salesman's Auto

Another arrest was made for alleged participation in a jewelry and clothing robbery here in December, 1932. Last night Mildred Angelina, 37, 1938 Trenton avenue, was taken into custody, given a preliminary hearing and held in $500 bail for court.

Four are now serving terms in jail for participation in the robbery; two others are under bail for trial at the next term of criminal court.

Those in jail are Augustus Indelicato, Margaret Mauro, Albert Mancini, and John Marchetti, all of Bristol. Fred Lasparella is being held for trial at the next term of court, and so is his sister, Mildred Angelina.

The hearing last night was only preliminary. Mrs. Angelina was represented by J. Leslie Kilocone. No testimony was heard.

Mrs. Angelina's son is now doing time in the Eastern "Pen" for holding up and robbing a gas station here on January 21, 1931.

The jewelry and clothing is alleged to have been taken from the automobile of Louis Newman, Trenton, N. J., while his salesman was in a house on Trenton avenue selling a bill of goods. The sedan was broken into and the contents taken.

Mrs. Angelina is charged with larceny and receiving stolen goods.

Guest On Automobile Ride Asks For $5,000 Damages

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 2.—Suing for damages amounting to $5,000, George V. Doan, Woodbourne resident, filed an action in trespass in the Court of Common Pleas here, naming Harry J. Moss and Mrs. Harry J. Moss, of 573 Rising Sun avenue, Philadelphia, the defendants.

The suit grew out of an automobile collision which is alleged to have taken place September 4, 1933, on the road leading from Wrightstown to Newtown.

In the statement of claim, it is alleged that Mrs. Moss was operating the car at the time of the accident. The plaintiff, Mr. Doan, was a guest of Harry Ashton and was riding in the Ashton car when injured. It is alleged.

MAN GLADLY SURRENDERS

Women have but recently come into the right of participating in public meetings and they have seized upon it with all the enthusiasm of beginners. They are today the great organizers, the makers of constitutions and by-laws, for garden clubs, church auxiliaries, sewing societies and other important bodies.

As is the way with people who meddle with parliamentary law, they do not infrequently become involved in its meshes. What more natural that they should appeal to their husbands to set them straight? Was it not man who framed Magna Charta, the Bill of Rights, the American Constitution and dozens of other instruments of government?

So it has come about that many a weary husband returns home to be asked the proper procedure for tabling a motion, for wording a resolution, for holding elections, and so forth. It would be distressing to disillusion his wife. He endeavors valiantly to maintain the fiction that every man knows all there is to be known about parliamentary law, when the best he himself has ever done was to second a motion at a Sunday School meeting. After once or twice having this trying experience of this nature a husband is more than ever convinced that women's place is in the home, where the constitution is unwritten, a humane disposition the rule and procedure anything but parliamentary.

Long ago the male of the species had his fling at constitutions and by-laws, but for a number of years he has been finding the sporting page radio tinkering and golf more intriguing. It is one traditionally masculine province man has gladly bequeathed to woman.

GEOLOGICAL QUESTS

Provocative questions by the dozen posed by Dr. Reginald A. Daly, Harvard geologist and winner of the Hayden Memorial Geological Award, only emphasized the fact that the world is still a planetary puzzle even to the foremost students of geology.

Two of his questions are as old as man and still unanswered: How old is the earth, and how did the oceans evolve? The only thing the scientists know is that fossils at least 500,000,000 years have been found and that there must have been life on this globe much longer ago than that.

What seems to amaze this famous geologist most is the fact that there is any land at all on this planet. He says nobody knows why the continents are not submerged in an universal ocean two miles deep.

One of his interesting theories is that there is no such thing as terra firma; that the continents are still in motion. To all intents and purposes they are as stationary as congressmen would like to be, and yet a geologist may some day prove them a bunch of floating and roving islands.

But the most puzzling thing of all is why such a romantic and adventurous and thrilling science as geology is one of the least popular of all hobbies.

Judgment Day isn't the only time when all of your past sins are revealed. Try running for office.

Why try to be perfect? You never see a bronze statue of a perfect man.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—He doesn't suspect it yet, but the Marquis De La Falaise is due for a surprise on the morning of February 11.

He'll get up expecting to spend his birthday on the high seas, far from Constance Bennett and from his friends in Hollywood.

The most he will hope for is a birthday greeting or two by radio.

But Connie has planned better than that.

Just before the S. S. Hoover sailed from Los Angeles harbor, carrying Hank on a movie expedition to Indo China, the star had a mysterious conference with the captain of the vessel.

She left a package in his care to be delivered to the marquis the first thing on the morning of the eleventh.

Inside, there is a phonograph record reproducing Connie's voice as she sings "Boulevard of Broken Dreams" for her new Twentieth Century picture and a platinum locket containing four pictures of the star.

New York fans can prepare for a real thrill. Clark Gable is headed for the east on his first trip since he became a star. Time and again, Clark made plans to revisit Broadway but always a picture came up.

Now he has the studio's okay and his reservations are made. It will be his first glimpse of Times Square since he flew to Los Angeles to take the part of Killer Mears in the coast production of "The Last Mile."

The return of John Farrow with a permanent quota number means that all his troubles with the Immigration Department are over and, if you can believe the gossip, that his wedding to Maureen O'Sullivan will take place in the near future—probably before she leaves on her vacation trip to Ireland.

John chose Mexico as the point of re-entry into the United States. Maureen made two trips to see him during his stay, and all the Mexican officials gave him a big send-off party on the evening before his return to Hollywood.

"Tarzan and His Mate," Maureen's film, will be finished in about three weeks. Most of Hollywood expects the wedding to take place then.

Trial separations are common in the film colony but Rochelle Hudson introduces the trial engagement. The little Fox star says that she and author Barry Trivers have agreed to plight their troth for a year. Meanwhile, during Trivers' absence in the east, Rochelle is free to go with other men. She and Marshall Duffell were together at the Tilden-Vines tennis matches. Marsh, of course, is Dorothy Lee's husband and they are very happy. Dorothy is in the east now making personal appearances.

Barbara Baroness, ex New York newspaperwoman who went into the movies and created a stir by getting a story on Garbo, had her article returned by the fan magazine to which she attempted to give it free. Within three days, she had sold it to another national magazine for $250.

QUICK GLIMPSES: Poor Mary Carlisle. She was in the midst of a complicated diet when they rushed her off to New York to make personal appearances. Rather than break the rules, she bought special food and gave it, with a list of full instructions, to the steward of the dining car. Then the dining car, with Mary's food, list and everything, was switched off at Kansas City.

The Mike Leveas are giving a big party Sunday to christen Warren William's four wire-haired puppies. The stars are invited to bring their dogs and a canine first-aid station is being installed in case of fights. . . . The February marriage of Merna Kennedy and Busby Berkeley will be Hollywood's biggest church wedding in years. More than 300 invitations are being issued. . . . Red Grange, college gridiron hero of a few years ago and now a professional footballer, is taking Kathryn Menjou to the late spots these evenings. . . . Lew Ayres is the latest star to buy a valley ranch. It's 300 acres. . . . Dean Markham, Bobbe Arnst's ex-boyfriend, and Carol McKay, from Broadway, are keeping regular company. . . . And Mrs. Tiffany Thayer (professional name, Tanagra) is opening a school of the dance in Westwood.

SYNOPSIS

After three years' travel in Europe, where she had gone following her father's death, young and beautiful Stanley Paige became bored and returned to New York to find the "something sort of sweet and important" which she felt she was missing. Stanley finds Perry Deverest, handsome young lawyer, still as much in love with her as ever, but her own heart is untouched. She longs for someone to love—someone to really belong to. Then she meets the fascinating Drew Armitage. It is love at sight. Drew's most recent heart had been sophisticated Dennis St. John. In breaking with her, he said: "You know, Dennis, you're a lot like me—you know when a thing is ended and you accept it—gracefully." Ned Wingate informs Stanley that the latter's lawyer, Charles Carleton, has been playing the market heavily and wonders if her funds are intact. Knowing that love to Stanley means marriage, Drew casually proposes. Realizing her extreme innocence, he regrets his flirtatious past.

CHAPTER NINE

They were to be married in September. Her Aunt Julie would come over then and see that everything was done quite properly and expensively. Aunt Julie would adore a wedding. She adored any excuse for spending money—other people's money. She had quite a talent for it. She had already spent a good deal of Stanley's and given herself a very good time doing it. Unfortunately Stanley had not enjoyed it so much. She had, in fact, not enjoyed it at all. She still shivered a bit when she thought of the months she had wasted trailing about after that insatiable person. She could still remember the reluctance with which she had always entered her aunt's heavily scented rooms, could still feel the amused scorn with which she had viewed that lady's rather pathetic love-affairs. She often wondered why she had not rebelled sooner; why she had allowed a relationship to continue which had been so utterly distasteful to her. She was intensely glad it was over.

Marriage, Stanley had never thought much about marriage. Now she thought of it a great deal. She thought of it today when, having left Marcin, she went on alone in a taxi to Dennis St. John's Marriage. . . . Drew's wife . . . always and forever his. It was a lovely thought. She liked to play with it. It caught her up and carried her away into a labyrinth of mysterious and breathless emotions. She sat very straight and stiff in the cab she had picked up just outside the Plaza and hoped she would always be beautiful, that Drew would never find her anything less, that they would never exhaust this high adventure, that always and forever there would be something more.

She didn't mind going to this party of Dennis'. Nigel Stern would be there and a lot of other comfortably uncaring people. They weren't like Marcin. They didn't ask questions. They didn't care. She had seen quite a bit of Dennis. Dennis rather puzzled her. She knew in some obscure, intuitive way that Dennis had queer ideas about life and love and things in general. Stanley wasn't sure she would like them if she knew about them. Dennis, sensing this, did not tell her. But occasionally she came dangerously near doing so.

As, for instance, today. "Well, that's that," she said carelessly, as the door closed on her last guest. "Have a good time, you funny child?"

She sat down in a deep chair, crossed her long legs and surveyed

"I don't imagine you've experimented much with love, Stanley. I'd take it rather lightly—at first."

Stanley with amused, friendly green eyes.

"Of course. It was nice of you to ask me."

"No, it wasn't. I'm afraid I don't do many 'nice' things now that I come to think of it. I'm entirely a creature of impulse and therefore utterly selfish." She reached for a cigarette, lighted it, inhaled deeply. "Sorry Drew couldn't make it—the party, I mean."

"Yes, You're sure you don't mind my waiting for him?"

"Perfectly sure. By the way, Stanley, you're quite a lot in love with Drew, aren't you?"

Stanley felt her face stiffen. She had no intention of discussing Drew with Dennis, or with anyone, for that matter.

Dennis refused to notice her withdrawal. She continued quite casually, her voice evenly impersonal. "I don't imagine you've experimented much with love, Stanley. I'd take it rather lightly—at first."

"Does one ever take love—lightly?" Stanley forgot her stiffness, asked the question with a certain grave directness.

"One does—if one is wise." Dennis frowned slightly. "Otherwise one is so terribly defenseless. The thing to do is to go so far and then retreat, while retreat is still possible. That's a very important thing in a love-affair—knowing when to retreat."

"Perhaps. But I don't believe I'm much interested in—love-affairs."

"My dear, every woman is, either consciously or unconsciously. It's the way we're made, and we're so darned vulnerable! But if one is clever and willing to profit by experience, well, you can have things pretty much your own way." Dennis paused to look at her speculatively. "I don't imagine you've had much experience."

"You're quite right. I've never felt any particular need of it—I don't now." Stanley's voice was a cool, obviously did not invite further discussion.

Dennis stared at the end of her cigarette reflectively. "Being in love doesn't last, you know," she said at last quite unemotionally.

"Not your kind, perhaps." Stanley was feeling very young, very ungracious. And a little smug.

"My kind is Drew's kind," was on the tip of Dennis' tongue but she closed her lips over it. Said instead, "I've found my kind most satisfactory—in the end."

"I'm quite sure I could never find it so." Stanley bit her soft underlip. She was being rude—unnecessarily so.

"Perhaps not." Dennis smiled at her suddenly. "It's so stupid, isn't it, trying to give other people advice they don't want and wouldn't know how to use, anyway. Drew is a most charming person—and he is very much in love with you."

"Yes, I know," Stanley spoke a bit rashly, her eyes losing their defiance, going suddenly wide and soft.

Dennis looked away swiftly. "He's been very much in love before, of course. It's the sort of thing he can't help."

Stanley leaned forward. Her eyes were still wide and lovely. "I know—he's told me. It doesn't matter. This is different, Dennis."

"You mean?"

"We're being married in September. We're not announcing it yet. I'm very happy."

"In that case," Dennis said, smiling at her softly, "a thousand good wishes. And forget everything I said, will you? It can't possibly be of any use to you."

Later, driving downtown beside Drew, through the thick, warm dusk, Stanley said to him, "I told Dennis, dear, about September. I hope you don't mind. She seemed to have some idea that I should be warned against you!"

Drew looked down at her, smiled reassuringly. "Not at all, Stanley. I'm rather glad you did tell her. Dennis is a bit hard-boiled and cynical. She has her own ideas—they're not yours, darling."

"Not yours, Drew?"

"Certainly not mine, Stanley. They might have been once—but we've agreed to forget that, haven't we? It couldn't have been otherwise—until I met you. You do understand that, don't you?"

"You know I do."

It was all so simple when Drew put it like that, so simple and so unimportant, those other love-affairs of Drew's. Stanley, conscious of his shoulder against hers, conscious of the look she would find in his eyes if she sought them, felt rather sorry for Dennis and very, very glad for herself.

What is a G. P. A. to do?

BIG BUSINESS has its laboratories and its bureau of standards where products submitted to General Purchasing Agents may be tested searchingly. But Big Business has not all the intelligent G. P. A.'s, nor has it any monopoly on big purchases.

The women of this country make eighty-five per cent of all retail purchases—and they influence the rest. They are G. P. A.'s for 25 million independent businesses, the households of America. Without charts, graphs, or laboratories, how are they to buy efficiently? How are they to be sure of securing honest, wholesome products for use by their families?

Their guide is advertising in the daily paper. They realize, sensibly enough, that the merchants of their town talk to them truthfully in advertisements. They watch these pages for news of advantageous purchases. They welcome the new or better product when informed of it through advertising.

The merchants and manufacturers who use this newspaper realize that your patronage, not only this year but next, is the life of their businesses. They test and criticize and study merchandise more rigorously than you ever could. You may read their advertisements with confidence. Guided by them, you may buy efficiently!

Any one can spend money — the reader of advertisements spends wisely

"Wrath of Everest Gods" Disturbing India

Indian Revolt Fears Over Everest "Curse"

Mahatma Gandhi

Mount Everest

Maharajah of Nepal

Marquess of Clydesdale

Everest plane

Commodore Fellowes

That the recent earthquake that killed thousands in India was caused by the wrath of the gods aroused by the insult they suffered when Commander P. F. M. Fellowes and the Marquess of Clydesdale flew over sacred Mount Everest last year, is the accusation made by Nepal priests which is carrying the British Administration in India. They recall that the last Indian Mutiny which cost a terrible toll in British lives was caused by a less significant violation of a religious belief—the grazing of bullocks with sacred cow fat. So while relief work goes on among earthquake sufferers, a keen lookout is being kept for first stirrings of revolt that might make the civil disobedience campaign of Mahatma Gandhi seem trifling by comparison. Although the British fliers are blamed for profaning the sacred mountain, they did it only after they had received permission from the Maharajah of Nepal, lord of the territory.

CALCUTTA, India (I. N.)—Will the superstition of the East accomplish what Mahatma Gandhi has failed to do in all his years of crusading, hunger-striking and jail martyrdom? Will it be the straw to break the back of British domination in India?

British Empire officials in India are anxiously awaiting the answer to those questions as the country still reels from the shock of the recent earthquake that blotted out between 10,000 and 20,000 lives, for millions of superstitious sons and daughters of Mother India lay the blame for the terrible disaster upon the "insult" offered to their gods by the British aviators who flew over Mount Everest, "Emperor of the Himalayas," last year, despite warning that the wrath of the gods would be visited upon the country in retaliation.

Warned by Priests

When Air Commodore P. F. M. Fellowes, of the British Air Force, and the Marquess of Clydesdale first appeared in the vicinity of Everest with their airplanes and other equipment and signified their intention to fly over the hitherto unconquered mountain, the Hindu priests in the district were horrified. They warned that no good would come of such profane treatment of the gods, which according to tradition, dwell on the mountain top.

But the Britishers went ahead, with full permission of the Maharajah of Nepal, in whose territory the sacred mount is situated. They accomplished their purpose, flew over Everest, made photographs and returned triumphantly to England.

But the prophetic words of Nepal's priests were recalled with dramatic suddenness when a terrible quake shook all India just eight months after the conquest of Everest. The holy men of Nepal lost no time in pointing out that the most severe shocks and greatest loss of life took place along a line traced by the shadow of the British planes that "profaned the sacred mountain."

Situation Grave

While we of the West may laugh off the affair as superstition, those who know the East are not so ready to laugh. It is a matter of history how the last Indian mutiny was caused by a seemingly insignificant incident of far less gravity than the recent earthquake.

It began when rumor seeped through ranks of native Indian regiments that the bullets used in their rifles were greased with bullock fat. As the cow and all its relatives is sacred in India, the natives cried "sacrilege," Indian soldiers wearing the uniform of England refused to handle arms used to profane their religion and the Indian Mutiny was begun. Before it ended with the relief of Lucknow many lives were lost, and England has never forgotten that it is not wise to meddle with the religious beliefs of Mother India.

Nowhere in the world does the famous quotation from Hamlet, "There are more things in Heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamed of in your philosophy," apply more than it does in India. Strange things happen here, many of them put down to slick feats of legendism, but a great many more for which science is unable to account. Those who know India and her mysterious ways consider the Everest story in connection with the recent earthquake as a veritable powder magazine that needs only the touch of a leader to set it off with a bang.

Accordingly, while every resource of the British Administration in India is being utilized for relief of earthquake sufferers, a watchful eye is being kept for the first stirrings of revolt. Mahatma's civil disobedience campaign is one thing. A Jihad, or holy war, is another. One thing is certain—henceforth the mighty Everest will be allowed to reign in supreme majesty unmolested by any more expeditions, either on foot or by air.

HAWKS SCORE THIRD VICTORY OF HALF

Continuing its drive for the second half championship of the Bristol Basketball League, the Hawks outfit won its third straight victory, trimming the Third Ward A. C. by the count of 35-27.

The Birds ran away with the score in the second half, completely routing the Pikers. The boys from downtown gave a spurt with a few minutes remaining to be played which brought the score closer but did not overshadow the great performance of the Hawks team in the early part of the half.

The first half of the game was nip and tuck with the totals of each team see-sawing throughout. Earle Frey kept the Hawks in the match with his accurate shooting this half and as the gun sounded the score was deadlocked at 12-12 with Morgan leading the attack of the Pikers.

PAPER-MAKERS WIN OUT OVER ODDFELLOWS

Although the Odd Fellows quintet threw a great scare into the Paterson Parchment Paper Company team last night, it lacked the final punch to score a victory. The Paper Makers chalked up a close 31-28 win before a crowd of three hundred who braved the snow-storm to witness the fray.

The Odd Fellows flashed a brilliant scoring attack which made the Paper Makers hustle to chalk up the win. The Black and White team staged a fast rally in the final quarter which boosted its score from 21 to 28 while the Paper Mill team score stood at 29. Before the period was over however, "Danny" Hines shoved in a field goal which gave the winners the three point edge.

HIGH SCHOOL TO BATTLE MORRISVILLE "BULLDOGS"

By Jack Orr

(Asst. H. S. Publicity Agent)
Tonight on the high school court, the battle for supremacy in the Lower Bucks County League will most likely end when the league-leading Morrisville "Bulldogs" travel here to clash with the "Strangers" of Bristol High, last year's champions.

Morrisville is leading the league with two victories and no defeats, closely followed by Southampton and Bristol, each with a win and a loss apiece. Bensalem is the cellar occupant of the league with nary a win and two setbacks.

Coach Hoffman of Morrisville builds his offense around Malmesbury, four letter man, who led the team in its overwhelming victory over the Bensalem five, 24-10.

If the Bristol club manages to beat the Blue and Gold the result will be a first position tie between the "Bulldogs" and the fighting Red and Gray. Coach Ruth Diemer's sextet, after suffering a set-back at the hands of the strong Abington six on Wednesday, will try to hit their stride again when they clash with the Morrisville girls. Tap-off, 7:30.

At the interval between the two games the Bristol High gym team will perform on the flying rings. The following boys will do their stuff: Leeper, Hinman, Hutchison, Conli, and Bristol High's immortal "Flit" Pico.

Boys' line-up:

Gallagher forward Kleinfelder

Spencer forward Mattis
Gibson Malmesbury

Birthday of Sorosis Marked at Langhorne

Ezekiah Pryor read a poem and Mrs. Harry Rothermel's reading was "Dr. Know-It-All." For February "portraits" suggestive of Washington's Birthday and of Valentine Day were shown, the six women being led by Mrs. Harry Taylor.

A kitchen orchestra was the feature of the four who celebrate their birthdays in March. From this group Mrs. Paul Vansant pleased with three vocal solos, the accompanist being Mrs. Harry Friedrich.

The eight women born in April gave a brief program suggestive of April Fools Day, with Mrs. Ralph Kinder reading short stories. The four May celebrants, in charge of Mrs. Joseph Edgerton, presented a sketch, "False Quest." For June a short history of the United States was read by Mrs. Horace Palmer, with historical characters being impersonated by four women.

Mrs. John Wood read a lesson in history for July and the eight women born in that month staged an Independence Day celebration by waving flags and ringing bells. For August, 18 members gave two stunts, with Mrs. Paul Bennetch in charge. Mrs. John Hart was in charge of the September celebration with seven taking part. These played school with appropriate songs and recitations.

For October, Halloween was marked with six women led by Miss Marian Longshore. Thanksgiving and Armistice Day were the features for November, there being eight born in that month. Mrs. Joseph Palmer directed the sketches. Short stories about the birthdays occurring in December were read by Mrs. Arthur Townsend. Six participated.

Landscape Transformed Into Gleaming Mass Of Whiteness By Snow-Fall

ence of half a hundred members of the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club, who had trudged through knee-deep snow to the weather works atop Gobbler's Knob. They did not wait long before the seer pulled himself from his burrow.

In consternation they watched as he wobbled weakly to the spot dedicated to the ancient and honorable art of shadow casting. Hide hanging loosely on his gaunt frame, cheeks drawn and his ordinarily blatant whiskers drooping sadly, he presented a pitiful figure. Gallantly he struggled over the side of the casting box and dropped from sheer exhaustion.

The faithful looked on in horror-stricken silence. Then as they started to voice their wonderment the chuck "Just a minute now," he gasped. "Wait till I get my breath. There's no cause for alarm. I've been cliniced and just as soon as I cast this shadow I'll tell you all about it."

He rested for a moment, then struggled to his feet and planted each paw firmly in the snow. A brilliant sun streaming through a gap in the clouds struck the seer at midriff and passed right on through. No shadow!

In consternation the chuck twisted and turned, rotated and revolved, oscillated and undulated, but all to no avail. Where the shadow should have been there was only a splash of sunshine.

"It's no use," the seer said wearily as he sank into the snow. "We seem to be all out of shadows. I've been hearing about folks who were too thin to cast a shadow all my life, but who would have thought it would happen to the champ?"

"Well, no shadow means winter is over. It means warbling birds, budding trees, grind organ men and circuses."

And as the dumbfounded weatherological crew started to pick up their paraphernalia preparatory to returning to Punxsutawney to tell an astounded world that the groundhog hadn't seen his shadow for the first time in a couple of milleniums and an annual magnus or two, the chuck halted them.

"Just a minute," he whined. "I want to explain this. I told you I'd been cliniced. When I turned in last November I couldn't sleep. Me, the runner-up in the all age sleeping stakes at McKees Rocks last year, couldn't sleep. Insomnia!"

"After I'd paced the floor for a couple of months Ma says you gotta be cliniced. And so I hunted myself up a clinic. After I'd told those doctor fellows everything I ever did, every pain I ever had they thumped me, bounced me, took blood out of me in a dozen places, X-rayed me, stomach-pumped me, fed me dyes, and X-rayed me some more, and then—well I'll have to leave something to your imaginations. After it was all over the Doc says to me: 'You're O. K. Just been worryin' about your job too much. Forget about it.'"

"Looks as though I had forgotten about it, doesn't it? But I'm getting better. You should have seen me last Tuesday. I was so thin one of the nurses mistook me for a thermometer and tried to stick me in my own mouth. A couple of good feeds and a month or two of sleep and you won't know me.

"I'll be back next February 2 and cast a shadow sharp enough to slice a ham off that Quarryville chuck. And that reminds me. If that measly, ill-begotten son of a pole-cat and a turkey buzzard casts any aspersions at the one and only prognosticator you just tell him that I said that if Pennsylvania had had a sterilization law for the unfit he'd never been born."

A minute later as he disappeared into his burrow he gave a pert twitch of his caudal appendage that seemed to augur columns for the comeback he declared he was ready to stage.

Speed Merchants

By BURNLEY

AS I gaze into the crystal ball, seeking to prophesy future happenings in the track world, all I can see in the coming indoor sprints are a tall dark man and a small light man.

The big brunette guy is very dark indeed—a septa-tinted Hercules whom you will recognize as Ralph Metcalfe, the black lightning flash of the West.

And of course Emmett Toppino is the undersized paleface. Mister Toppino, you will recall, is the sawed-off speedster who dominated the indoor sprints for some time in the recent past, only to be dethroned by the aforesaid Metcalfe in last year's indoor nationals. The Southern Flyer got his revenge on the black Thunderbolt of Marquette when he ran away from Metcalfe in a subsequent indoor dash.

This week-end in the Millrose games at New York City, Metcalfe and his chunky Southern rival will meet in a "rubber" argument. Before the present indoor campaign has passed into track history, these two stars will have settled the question of indoor sprint supremacy between them.

The giant Marquette speed merchant is virtually unbeatable over the 100-yard distance outdoors, but at the 50- or 60-yard indoor distance, little Toppino can compete with him on even terms. Emmett specializes in a lightning fast start, which is all important in the shorter distances, while the dusky Metcalfe gathers more speed as he nears the finish line.

Who will prove to be the master—the tall, dark gent, or the small, light guy? Alas, my mystic crystal grows blurred at this point, but just the same I will go on record as prophesying that Mister Metcalfe will spank Mister Toppino in a majority of their coming indoor duels. The big guy usually wins!
